Radical History Walking Tours – Atlanta 2001 Sunday, October 21

"Segregation and uprisings in downtown Atlanta: The hidden history of the city"

This three-hour tour focuses on the hidden history of the city. It will contrast the growth of Atlanta's downtown into a regional and national node with its creation and enforcement of a color line supporting segregation. It will also focus on the sites of the civil rights marches that helped to bring an end to the color line. Among the sites visited will be the State Capitol, where Tom Watson's statue representing turn-of-the-century racial politics stands on a plaza where Civil Rights leaders spoke for racial justice; the Flatiron Building, which housed the office of the Ku Klux Klan; the Henry Grady Statue, which memorializes the message allowing the South of Segregation to continue in the interests of economic investment in the region, but which also is the location of racial atrocities of the Race Riot of 1906, where white mobs attacked black workers coming home from work on trolleys; and Auburn Avenue, the street of African-American Enterprise, where black business sprang up in a separate part of the downtown after the Race Riot of 1906, and which served as the staging area of the black protests of the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s.

Time: 9:00 am – 12 noon

Cost: $10

Tour leader: Tim Crimmins, professor of history, Georgia State University

The tour focuses on both famous and ordinary women who are buried at Oakland, it incorporates Atlanta and Georgia history as well. Some highlights from the tour are: Margaret Mitchell, author of Gone With the Wind; Nellie Peters Black, recognized as a Georgia Woman of Achievement for her social work contributions; Selena Sloan Butler, one of the three founders of the National PTA (Parent-Teacher Association) and founder of the Colored Parent-Teacher Association; and Carrie Steele Logan, founder of Atlanta's first black orphanage, known today as the Carrie Steele-Pitts Home.
